"Trading Power is the single best and most complete analysis of West Germany's rise to dominance in cold war Europe. Based on extraordinarily in-depth research, Gray skillfully and clearly tells the story of the diplomatic, political, and economic development of German power within the European community, the Atlantic alliance, and the international system.

Several of those debates were explicitly framed around the notion of "reluctance": for example, Paterson (2011) famously argued that Germany was a "reluctant hegemon" in Europe, and The Economist took over this notion on one of its covers in 2013, calling for a more active engagement of Germany in Europe, arguing that "Germany's ...
