Is New Zealand bridging the infrastructure gap?

Bridging the Infrastructure Gap: Funding and Financing Aotearoa New Zealand will be publicly available on June 26. A report released next week argues the real problem with New Zealand's inadequate infrastructure is not money - it's the three-year political cycle. We need a 30-year, cross-party national plan.

Should New Zealand invest more in infrastructure?

New Zealand's infrastructure challenges are too large to fix by simply investing more. At present, we spend roughly one out of every twenty dollars we earn as a country on public investment, but this research finds that we would need to lift that to nearly one of every ten dollars to fully address our infrastructure challenges through new investment.
