Cleantech refers to the technologies, techniques and services that enable us to exploit natural resources in more efficient ways. It involves an extremely diverse range of products, services and processes developed not just to provide superior performance at lower cost but also to reduce - or even eliminate - their negative impact on the environment.

Tako cleantech Switzerland

Les cleantech regroupent les technologies, produits et services qui visent une utilisation durable des ressources, qui permettent d"accélérer la transition énergétique et répondre aux défis liés aux changements climatiques. Elles visent en particulier à réduire la consommation des ressources et à ménager les systèmes naturels.

In Western Switzerland, cleantech companies have ample opportunities to collaborate with world-renowned research institutes. The Energy Center of the Federal Institute of Technology in Lausanne (EPFL) promotes multidisciplinary research networks and projects in sustainable technology, with a focus on energy transportation, distribution, and ...
